1 2 3 5 The Honorable John C. Coughenour 6 7 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON 8 AT SEATTLE 9 10 THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, NO. 2:18-cy-01304-JCC 11 ex rel., AMAR SAFADI, appearing qui tam, 12 Plaintiff, FINDINGS OF FACT AND 13 CONCLUSIONS OF LAW V. 14 NOTE ON MOTION CALENDAR: STATE OF WASHINGTON, November 30th, 2018 15 Defendant. 16 1. FINDINGS OF FACT 17 a) Background 18 19 20 21

During the 1930s, the United States of America was facing the Great Depression, a time when poverty was universal. On August 14th, 1935, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the Social Security Act (SSA) into law (42 U.S.C. ch. 7). This Act became law at such a difficult time in our history when the nation needed a solution for poverty, unemployment, and the burdens of widows and fatherless children. It was a great initiative by the Federal Government to advocate federal assistance for the needy. Signing this Act into law was historic and in good faith. In 1975, the Federal Government enacted the Child Support Enforcement and Paternity Establishment Program (CSE). This act was put in place to not only pursue a parent who was responsible for the financial support of a child, but to also establish paternity for a child who is born outside of marriage, so child support can be collected from the biological father. The Law also amended the Social Security Act (Title IV, part D), authorizing Federal matching funds for enforcement purposes. The States are the primary administrators of the CSE program, but the Federal Government serves to direct and help the states. However, States are required to meet certain federal standards to receive the block grant funding. The CSE program was intended to help strengthen families by securing financial support for children on a consistent and continuing basis and by helping some of these families to remain self-sufficient and off public assistance. When the program was first established, its goals were to reimburse the states and the federal government for the welfare payments they provided families. However, over the years, few sections of this law became outdated and abused.

b) Findings of Fact

Abuse of Process

For the past ten years, the State of Washington has been receiving around $78M annually from the Federal Government for the Child Support Enforcement Program (CFDA Numbers 93563 and 93564) (Source: taggs.hhs.gov). It was found that the State of Washington represented by Snohomish County Prosecutor's Office has abused the process in relation to the administration of the Child Support Enforcement Program since 2001. The Snohomish County Prosecutor's Office has secretly appointed a Snohomish County Deputy Prosecutor who works in family division to work as a pro bono legal aid family law attorney in Snohomish County Legal Services. Snohomish County Legal Services is a 501(c)(3) tax-exempt charitable organization that is incorporated in Everett, Washington. This legal aid firm has been appointing to its board of directors several of the Snohomish County Superior Court judges in clear conflict of interest. In 2015, Snohomish County Legal Services concealed the sources of $539,081 in grant funding. It was found that the State of Washington represented by Snohomish County Prosecutor's Office has been presenting restraining and protection orders to the Snohomish County Superior Court judges and commissioners in Dissolution of Marriage with Children cases.

FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW 2:18-cv-01304-JCC

These orders were presented with baseless allegations of domestic violence. The Snohomish County Superior Court signed these orders in the absence of due process thus barring parents' access to their children. It was found that this was an effort by the State to maximize the child support payment and thus the federal incentive that the State receives for enforcing child support pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 658a. The Snohomish County Prosecutor's Office has conspired with the Washington State Department of Health and Social Services to issue Income Withholding Orders (IWO) to extort child support payments from parents regardless of their financial abilities. This scheme has led to many absent-parent households and escalated the problem of homelessness in the State of Washington. The Washington State Bar Association has also conspired to protect State officials from discipline and prosecution by dismissing numerous grievances despite evidence of professional misconduct that included corruption. Over the years, the State of Washington has repeatedly violated Americans' civil rights by denying citizens equal due process in court proceedings in violation of the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution. Furthermore, it was found that Washington State's statutes in regards to child custody and support are unconstitutional. A child has a right to experience a consistent, loving, and reciprocating relationship with both parents. No state can deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law nor deny any person the equal protection of the laws.

a) This Court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the State of Washington has abused the process in relation to the Child Support Enforcement Program. The court concludes that the State of Washington's participation in the Child Support Enforcement Program and the federal incentives received under this program shall be suspended until the State reforms its family courts and audit its judiciary and bar association. The State shall amend its statutes to be in compliance with the United States Constitution, Articles, and Amendments. The State shall provide proof of the amendments to its statutes to this court before participation in the CSE Program is reinstated. Without delay, the State

In regards to child custody, this court concludes that the current state law violates the legal custody of children. Both mothers and fathers have equal rights to the legal custody of their children under the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Legal custody and physical custody are two distinct terms. If one parent is the physical custodian, that should not deprive the other parent of his or her legal custody of a child. The State should not interfere in the physical custody of children

- The rights of parents to the care, custody and nurture of their children is of such character that it cannot be denied without violating those fundamental principles of liberty and justice which lie at the base of all our civil and political institutions, and such right is a fundamental right protected by this amendment (First) and Amendments 5, 9, and 14.

- Parent's interest in custody of her children is a liberty interest which has received considerable constitutional protection; a parent who is deprived of custody of his or her child, even though temporarily, suffers thereby grievous loss and such loss deserves extensive due process protection.

- Separated as our issue is from that of the future interests of the children, we have before us the elemental question whether a court of a state, where a mother is neither domiciled, resident nor present, may cut off her immediate right to the care, custody, management and companionship of her minor children without having jurisdiction over her in personam. Rights far more precious to appellant than property rights will be cut off if she is to be bound by the Wisconsin award of custody. May v. Anderson, 345 US 528, 533; 73 S Ct 840, 843, (1952)

- The Court stressed, "the parent-child relationship is an important interest that undeniably warrants deference and, absent a powerful countervailing interest, protection." A parent's interest in the companionship, care, custody and management of his or her children rises to a constitutionally secured right, given the centrality of family life as the focus for personal meaning and

- The United States Supreme Court held that the "old notion" that "generally it is the man's primary responsibility to provide a home and its essentials" can no longer justify a statute that discriminates on the basis of gender. No longer is the female destined solely for the home and the rearing of the family, and only the male for the marketplace and the world of ideas.

- State Judges, as well as federal, have the responsibility to respect and protect persons from violations of federal constitutional rights. Gross v. State of Illinois, 312 F 2d 257, (1963)
- The Constitution also protects "the individual interest in avoiding disclosure of personal matters." Federal Courts (and State Courts), under Griswold can protect, under the "life, liberty and pursuit of happiness" phrase of the Declaration of Independence, the right of a man to enjoy the mutual care, company, love and affection of his children, and this cannot be taken away from him without due process of law. There is a family right to privacy, which the state cannot invade or it becomes actionable for civil rights damages. Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 US 479, (1965)
- The right of a parent not to be deprived of parental rights without a showing of fitness, abandonment or substantial neglect is so fundamental and basic as to rank among the rights contained in this Amendment (Ninth) and Utah's Constitution, Article 1 § 1.

- State's power to legislate, adjudicate and administer all aspects of family law, including determinations of custodial; and visitation rights, is subject to scrutiny by federal judiciary within reach of due process and/or equal protection clauses of 14th Amendment...Fourteenth Amendment applied to states through specific rights contained in the first eight amendments of the Constitution which declares fundamental personal rights...Fourteenth Amendment encompasses and applied to states those preexisting fundamental rights recognized by the Ninth Amendment. The Ninth Amendment acknowledged the prior existence of fundamental rights with it: "The enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people." The United States Supreme Court, in a long line of decisions, has recognized that matters involving marriage, procreation, and the parent-child relationship are among those fundamental "liberty" interests protected by the Constitution. Thus, the decision in Roe v. Wade, 410 US 113; 93 S Ct 705; 35 L Ed 2d 147, (1973), was recently described by the Supreme Court as found on the "Constitutional underpinning of ... a recognition that the "liberty" protected by the Due Process Clause of the 14th Amendment includes not only the freedoms explicitly mentioned in the Bill of Rights, but also a freedom of personal choice in certain matters of marriage and family life." The non-custodial divorced parent has no way to implement the constitutionally protected right to maintain a parental relationship with his child except through visitation. To acknowledge the protected status of the relationship as the majority does, and yet deny protection under Title 42 U.S.C. § 1983, to visitation, which is the exclusive means of effecting that right, is to negate the right completely. Wise v. Bravo, 666 F.2d 1328, (1981)

• In controversies affecting the custody of an infant, the interest and welfare of the child is the primary and controlling question by which the court must be guided. This rule is based upon the theory that the state must perpetuate itself, and good citizenship is essential to that end. Though nature gives to parents the right to the custody of their own children, and such right is scarcely less sacred than the right to life and liberty, and is manifested in all animal life, yet among mankind the necessity for government has forced the recognition of the rule that the perpetuity of the state is the first consideration, and parental authority itself is subordinate to this supreme power. It is recognized that: 'The moment a child is born it owes allegiance to the government of the country of its birth, and is entitled to the protection of that government. And such government is obligated by its duty of protection, to consult the welfare, comfort and interest of such child in regulating its custody during the period of its minority.' Mercein v. People, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 64, 103, 35 Am. Dec. 653; McKercher v. Green, 13 Colo. App. 271, 58 Pac. 406

But as government should never interfere with the natural rights of man, except only when it is essential for the good of society, the state recognizes, and enforces, the right which nature gives to parents [48 Colo. 466] to the custody of their own children, and only supervenes with its sovereign power when the necessities of the case require it. The experience of man has demonstrated that the best development of a young life is within the sacred precincts of a home, the members of which are bound together by ties entwined through 'bone of their bone and flesh of their flesh'; that it is in such homes and under such influences that the sweetest, purest, noblest, and most attractive qualities of human nature, so essential to good citizenship, are best nurtured and grow to wholesome fruition; that, when a state is based and built upon such homes, it is strong in patriotism, courage, and all the elements of the best civilization. Accordingly these recurring facts in the experience of man resulted in a presumption establishing prima facie that parents are in every way qualified to have the care, custody, and control of their own offspring, and that their welfare and interests are best subserved under such control. Thus, by natural law, by common law, and, likewise, the statutes of this state, the natural parents are entitled to the custody of their minor children, except when they are unsuitable persons to be entrusted with their care, control, and education, or when some exceptional circumstances appear which render such custody inimicable to the best interests of the child. While the right of a parent to the custody of its infant child is therefore, in a sense, contingent, the right can never be lost or taken away so long as the parent properly nurtures, maintains, and cares for the child.

Wilson v. Mitchell, 111 P. 21, 25-26, 48 Colo. 454 (Colo. 1910)

In regards to child support, this court concludes that the current state law is in direct violation c) of the United States Constitution (Article I, Sections 9 and 10) that prohibits bills of attainder or ex post facto laws. The law currently classifies divorcing parents as custodian (oblige) and non-custodian (obligor), denies the non-custodial parent equal due process by trial, then "punishes" the non-custodial parent with child support. Punishment has the forms of wage withholding, liens on property; offset of unemployment compensation payments; seizure and sale of personal or real property; reporting arrearages to credit agencies to prevent the undeserved extension of credit; seizure of State and Federal income tax refunds; revocation of various types of licenses (driver's, business, occupational, recreational), attachment of lottery winnings and insurance settlements of debtors parents; requirement that recipients of financial assistance from the Small Business Administration, including direct loans and loan guarantees, must certify that the recipient is not more than 60 days delinquent in the payment of child support, authority to seize assets held by public or private retirement funds and financial institutions; deprivation of a debtor to a fresh start to discharge a debt completely, pay a percentage of the debt, or pay the full amount of the debt over a longer period of time because debts for child support and alimony are not dischargeable, and State or Federal imprisonment, fines or both.

- The Supreme Court has explained that a bill of attainder is a law that legislatively determines guilt and inflicts punishment upon an identifiable individual or group of individuals without provision of the protections of a judicial trial. United States v. Brown, 381 U.S. 437, 448-50 (1965)
- There are 3 requirements for a bill of attainder (1) specification of the affected person or persons; (2) punishment; and (3) lack of conviction by trial. The Bill of Attainder Clause is to be liberally construed in the light of its purpose to prevent legislative punishment of designated persons or groups. United States v. Brown, 381 U.S. 437 (1965)
- "The Due Process Clause" is a restraint on the legislative as well as on the executive and judicial powers of the government, and cannot be so construed as to leave congress free to make any process "due process of law," by its mere will.

Rafeedie v. INS, 880 F. 2d 506; US Ct App DC Cir, (1989)

1 3. CONCLUSION 2 In light of the findings of fact and conclusions of law, the Court ORDERS that: 3 The State of Washington shall: Arrest and hand over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation any person found to be directly 4 5 involved in the Racketeering and Corruption to be prosecuted pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 1963. Amend the Revised Code of Washington to be in compliance with the United States Constitution, 6 7 Articles, and Amendments by 12/31/2019. Revise Washington Court Form FL All Family 140 (Parenting Plan) by 12/31/2019. 8 Prosecute against perjury to the maximum allowed by law. 9 Reform the State's Family Courts by 12/31/2019. 10 Allow for equal due process in State's courts. 11 Allow 50/50 legal shared custody of children. 12 Not interfere with the physical custody of children if there is no valid limitation on their parents. 13 Defer physical custody decisions to Alternative Dispute Resolution in the absence of limitation. 14 Immediately halt the issuance of all Bills of Attainder. 15 Audit the State's judiciary and bar association. 16 Immediately halt all child support enforcement. 17 Release all detainees who are imprisoned for failing to pay child support. 18 Investigate election frauds in Snohomish County. 19 IT IS SO ORDERED. 20 Dated this 13th day of November, 2018. 21 Presented By: Amar Safadi, qui tam 22 23 24 UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE Signature 25
